Few local businesses in the Roanoke Valley can say they have been scrubbing kitchens and vacuuming carpets for more than four decades. The Happy Housekeepers can. Mary Jane Wszolek, President of Mar-Ja Enterprises, Inc., started the company in 1979, and more than four decades later it is still the cleaning service Roanoke families and business owners call when they want the job done properly the first time.

A Roanoke Valley Name Built One Home and Office at a Time

What began as a home cleaning operation grew steadily as customers asked for more. https://pastelink.net/esi879ow In 1986 the company formed Corporate Clean, a division dedicated to janitorial and commercial work, so offices, executive suites and medical facilities could get the same attention that homes were already getting. Later came specialized services for builders, contractors and apartment managers, along with move-in and move-out cleanings. The result is a true one-call cleaning service for the whole valley.

Longevity matters in this trade because it reflects how a company treats people. Mary Jane passed away suddenly in 1999, and the family carried on her work ethic, including the simple promise that has always been part of the business: satisfaction guaranteed. Today the company is led by President Paula Anderson and remains locally owned and operated from its office on Starkey Road in the Cave Spring area of southwest Roanoke County.

The company has held BBB accreditation since December 1993 and carries an A+ rating with the Better Business Bureau. Every employee is bonded and insured through the company, which is why so many clients are comfortable handing over a key and getting on with their day. Plans are flexible, with one-time, weekly, bi-weekly and monthly visits available, and every first cleaning is followed by a phone call to make sure you are happy with the result.

Part of what keeps clients loyal is how simple the company is to work with. There is no call center in another state and no app you are forced to download. You call the office, a real person answers, and a representative arranges your estimate. Products and equipment are supplied, though you are always welcome to ask the crew to use a favorite product of your own. If a detail is missed, a quick call gets it put right, which is exactly how a family business should operate.
