Cardiff city centre is best known for the castle, Queen Street and roofers cardiff the Principality Stadium, yet above the shopfronts sit a great many roofs that most people never notice. Older townhouses, converted buildings and flats above shops all need looking after, and the roofing work involved is rarely simple. Redland Roofing Cardiff is a family-owned roofing contractor based in Rumney, a short drive into town along Newport Road, and it brings over 30 years of experience to homes right in the heart of the city. Flats above shops come with their own set of problems. The roof is often a mix of old slate, later extensions and small flat sections over rear additions, and each part may have been patched by different people over the decades. Leaks can travel a long way before they show, so a damp patch in a first-floor flat might start at a valley, a failed lead joint or a blocked gutter some distance from the stain. Landlords and leaseholders need a roofer in Cardiff who will trace the real cause rather than patching whatever happens to be nearest. Leak assessment and thorough inspection both come up in the firm's Google reviews. Access is the other big factor. City centre streets are busy, pavements are narrow and parking is tight, so every job needs thinking through before anyone goes up a ladder. Around the civic centre in Cathays Park and the older streets near Bute Park, trees drop leaves into gutters every autumn, and blocked outlets on tall buildings quickly send water pouring down the brickwork. Redland Roofing Cardiff handles gutters, fascias and soffits, lead work, chimney repairs, flat roof replacement and full re-roofs, so one team can look after the whole roof rather than one small corner of it. The same care goes into homes a little further out, from Butetown and Cardiff Bay to Roath and Cathays.
