2. The Retaliation Rule: If a player loses a round, they hardly ever throw the very same shape once again. Rather, they usually switch to the item that would have beaten what just defeated them. For example, if Player A loses with Rock against Paper, they will likely toss Scissors in the next round.
3. Pattern Imitation: Players frequently unconsciously mirror their opponents over a series of rounds, causing foreseeable sequences of draws and rotating wins.

Strategies for Success

- Make use of the First-Timer: If playing versus an inexperienced opponent, open with Paper. Since newbies heavily prefer Rock on the very first toss, Paper is statistically the safest opening bet.
- Use the "Conditioning" Method: Play psychologically with the opponent. If you toss Rock twice in a row, the opponent will presume you won't do it a 3rd time, expecting you to change. They will likely play Paper, which suggests you must throw Scissors to win.
- View the Hands: Amateurs often tense the muscles appropriate to their upcoming throw. A tight fist hints at Rock; loose, fluttering fingers suggest Paper; two extended fingers hint at Scissors.
