

KPM Academic Calendar 2027: Key Dates and Term Structure for Malaysian Schools

The Ministry of Education Malaysia has structured the 2027 school year around two main semesters, with state-based holiday groupings that affect nearly five million students nationwide. The kpm academic calendar 2027 divides the country into two groups for school holidays, Group A and Group B, to stagger break periods and ease pressure on domestic travel infrastructure.

Semester One: January to May 2027

School sessions for the first semester begin in early January 2027 for most states. Group A, which includes Johor, Kedah, Kelantan, and Terengganu, starts its term on a slightly different schedule from Group B, which covers the remaining states and the federal territories. This arrangement has been in place for several years and helps reduce congestion at popular holiday destinations during peak periods.

The first semester runs for approximately 20 weeks, with a mid-term break typically in March. For Group A schools, the mid-term holiday falls earlier in the month, while Group B schools observe their break a week later. The kpm academic calendar 2027 also accounts for the month of Ramadan, which is expected to begin around late January 2027, meaning that schooling continues through the fasting period with adjusted timings for Muslim students.

Semester Two: June to November 2027

The second semester commences in early June after a four-week break for the Hari Raya Aidilfitri holidays. The second semester is slightly shorter than the first, lasting around 18 weeks, and includes a mid-term break in September. The year-end examinations for upper secondary students are scheduled for October and November, with results expected to be released in early 2028.

For students in Form Three, the Pentaksiran Tingkatan Tiga (PT3) assessment is placed in October, while Sijil Pelajaran Malaysia (SPM) candidates sit for their papers from November through December. The kpm academic calendar 2027 does not specify exact exam dates, as these are typically confirmed by the Malaysian Examinations Syndicate closer to the time.

Holiday Groupings and State Allocations

The Ministry of Education maintains two distinct holiday groupings to manage school breaks across the country. Group A comprises Johor, Kedah, Kelantan, and Terengganu. Group B includes Perlis, Pulau Pinang, Perak, Selangor, Negeri Sembilan, Melaka, Pahang, Sabah, Sarawak, and the federal territories of Kuala Lumpur, Putrajaya, and Labuan.

This grouping affects all school holidays, including the mid-term breaks, the Hari Raya Aidilfitri holidays, and the year-end break. Parents and guardians need to check which group their child's school falls under when planning family holidays or medical appointments during the school term.

Public Holidays and Replacement Days

The 2027 calendar includes several public holidays that fall on school days. When a gazetted public holiday coincides with a school day, the Ministry of Education typically designates a replacement school day, often on a Saturday. For 2027, the federal public holidays that may affect school attendance include Chinese New Year in February, Hari Raya Aidilfitri in April, and Deepavali in October.

Each state also observes its own public holidays, such as the Sultan of Terengganu's birthday or the Gawai Dayak festival in Sarawak. Schools in the affected states will close on those days, and the Ministry of Education issues separate circulars for replacement days at the state level.

Teacher Professional Development Days

The academic calendar also sets aside several days for teacher training and school administration. These professional development days, known as Hari Guru dan Hari Latihan, typically occur at the start of each semester and during the mid-term breaks. On these days, students do not attend school, while teachers participate in workshops, curriculum planning, and school improvement activities.

For 2027, the Ministry of Education has allocated five such days across the year, though the exact dates vary by state and by individual school. Parents should receive notice from their child's school at least two weeks before any scheduled professional development day.

Year-End Break and Transition to 2028

The school year concludes in November for most students, with the year-end break beginning after the final examination period. For students who are not sitting for national examinations, the break starts in mid-November and runs through the end of December. For SPM and STPM candidates, the year-end break begins only after their last paper, which can extend into early January 2028.

The Ministry of Education typically releases the academic calendar for the following year in the third quarter of the current year. Parents and educators can expect the 2028 calendar to be published around September 2027, with similar term structures and holiday groupings.

State-Specific Variations for Sabah and Sarawak

Schools in Sabah and Sarawak follow the same semester structure as Group B states but observe additional local holidays. Sarawak schools close for the Gawai Dayak festival in June, while Sabah schools observe the Kaamatan festival in May. The Ministry of Education coordinates with state education departments to ensure that these holidays do not conflict with national examination schedules.

For 2027, the Ministry of Education has confirmed that the academic calendar for Sabah and Sarawak aligns with Group B dates, with the exception of state-specific public holidays. Parents in these states should refer to their state education department's circulars for the exact holiday dates.

Supporting Families with Planning

The release of the kpm academic calendar 2027 well in advance of the school year allows families to plan their annual leave, medical appointments, and travel arrangements. The Ministry of Education encourages parents to download the official calendar from their school or state education department's website as soon as it is published, to avoid relying on third-party summaries that may contain errors.

Schools typically distribute a printed version of the calendar during the first week of term, but the official digital copy remains the authoritative source for term dates and holiday periods. The Ministry of Education also operates a hotline and email enquiry service for parents who need clarification on specific dates.
