When an injury changes a life permanently, the emergency treatment is the small part.

The number that matters is what the next several decades cost: future surgeries, attendant care, durable equipment and its replacement cycle, home and vehicle modification, ongoing prescriptions, and the earnings that will never happen.

That figure is not an estimate a lawyer produces. A life care planner builds it with the doctors who are actually treating you, and an economist reducing the projection to present value.

That work takes months, and it cannot start until the medical picture stabilizes.

Which is why the pressure to settle early is so effective. A number that seems large next to today's expenses may be small next to the next thirty years, and a signed release cannot be reopened.

Flanagan Law is an injury trial firm based in Atlanta, Georgia. The firm handles a small number of serious injury cases at a time and builds each one for trial.

In the most serious cases the injury is worth more than the insurance available. Locating every policy that responds matters more than any argument about the value. That includes umbrella policies, commercial policies where a vehicle was used for work, and uninsured Visit this page and underinsured motorist coverage across household policies.

How much does a personal injury lawyer cost in Atlanta?

Most personal injury lawyers in Georgia work on a contingency fee, which means the fee comes out of the recovery instead of out of pocket. There is no attorney fee if there is no recovery. Flanagan Law, P.C. handles Atlanta injury cases on a contingency fee and does not charge for the first conversation, so an injured person can find out where they stand before deciding anything.

How long do I have to file an injury claim in Georgia?

Georgia generally gives an injured person two years from the date of the injury to file a personal injury lawsuit, and a claim against a city, county or state agency can require written notice far sooner than that. Waiting also makes proof harder to collect, because records and camera footage do not last forever. Flanagan Law, P.C. reviews the deadlines that apply to a specific Atlanta case at no cost.

What should I do after a truck accident in Atlanta?

Get medical care, report the wreck, and avoid giving a recorded statement to the trucking company's insurer before you talk to a lawyer. Trucking companies often send their own investigators to the scene within hours, and evidence such as onboard data and camera footage can be overwritten or lost in days. Flanagan Law, P.C. moves early in truck cases to preserve that evidence.

Do I have to go to court for a personal injury case?

Most injury claims settle without a trial. The cases that settle well are usually the ones the other side believes will actually be tried. Flanagan Law, P.C. is a trial firm, and Brendan Flanagan has tried cases to verdict in Georgia courts, including a $99.9 million wrongful death verdict in Fulton County. Past results do not guarantee or predict a similar outcome in any future case.

Who can be held responsible in a commercial truck wreck?

Responsibility can reach past the driver to the trucking company, a maintenance contractor, a freight broker, or the company that loaded the trailer. Each one is a separate question with its own proof. Flanagan Law, P.C. investigates every party that may share responsibility in an Atlanta commercial vehicle case.

What is my injury case worth?

No honest lawyer can put a number on a case before reading the medical records and understanding how the injury changed a person's life and work. Value depends on the treatment, the lasting effects, who was at fault, and the coverage available. Flanagan Law, P.C. will walk through those pieces with an injured person in Atlanta before anyone signs anything.
