Fairfax Divorce Lawyers The Irving Law Firm Fairfax VA Navigating a divorce in Fairfax County requires legal guidance that is both technically precise and genuinely attuned to the human dimensions of the process. The Irving Law Firm, known throughout Northern Virginia as Fairfax Divorce Lawyers, brings both qualities to every family law matter it handles. Led by Managing Partner John J. Irving, the firm has assembled a team of dedicated attorneys and support staff whose combined experience across contested divorce, custody, spousal support, and equitable distribution makes it one of the most capable family law practices in the region. The firm is located at 10505 Judicial Drive in Fairfax, a short distance from the Fairfax County Circuit Court where most top criminal defense attorney divorce matters are filed and litigated. This proximity is practical: attorneys who appear regularly in Fairfax courts develop familiarity with local procedures, judge preferences, and the administrative realities that affect timelines and outcomes. The Irving Law Firm has built this local knowledge over years of consistent practice in Fairfax County courts, and clients benefit directly from it. Virginia divorce law presents complexities that go beyond what most people anticipate when they first face the process. The Commonwealth requires a period of physical separation before a no-fault divorce can proceed, and it uses equitable distribution rather than a mechanical fifty-fifty split to divide marital property. Child custody decisions are made under a best interests standard that considers numerous statutory factors, and spousal support is determined on a case-by-case basis rather than by formula. Each of these dimensions requires careful analysis and thoughtful strategy.
